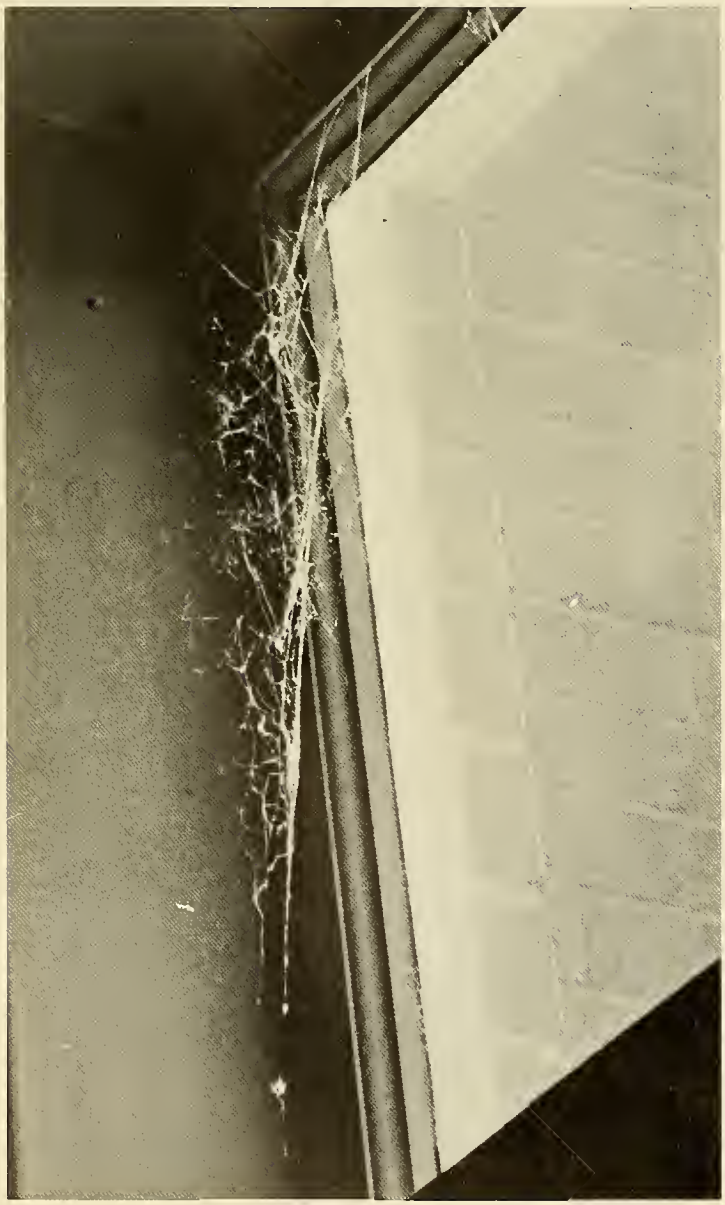
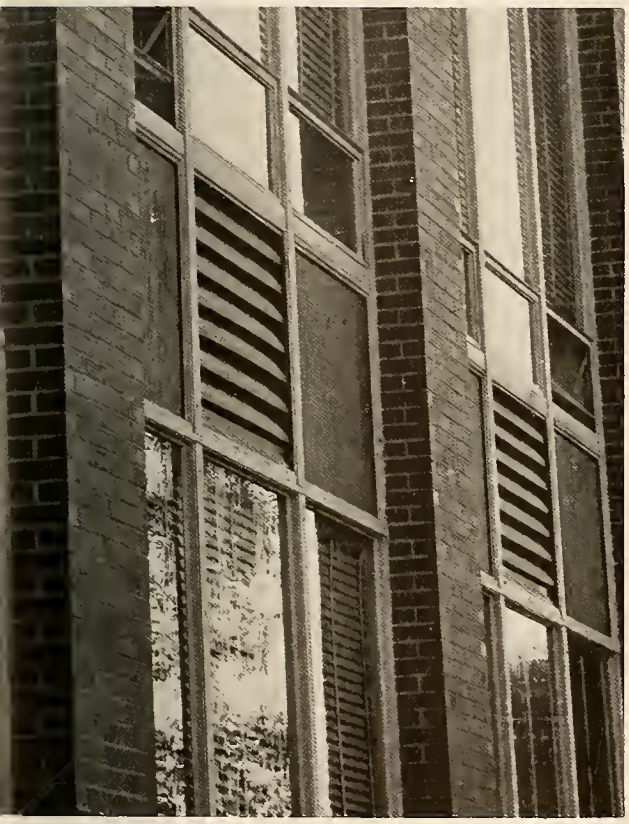
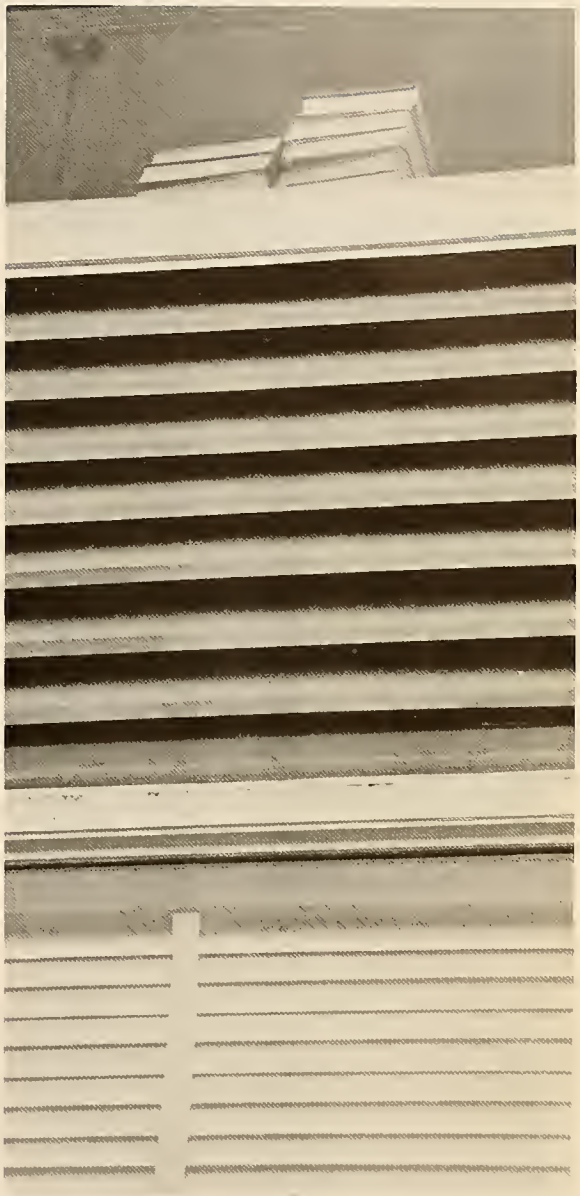
Prologue

A child is born, and he reaches out to clutch at this new presence—life—which nearly overwhelms him. He grows and passes from the stage of desire for mere existence onto that plane which instills in him a longing for acceptance, friendship, involvement with other people. He becomes a man, and stands within a flexing sphere of concern—for others' feelings and his own, for answers and solutions to ancient questions, for that tomorrow which may be forever. These ends he must attain or perish, an apathetic thing . . .







We have come thus far in our lives: we stand ready, yet unprepared—sure, yet ever-searching—brave, yet frightened—and beyond stretches the world, beckoning. And because we are human, because we are American, because we are young, we will follow.

Dedication

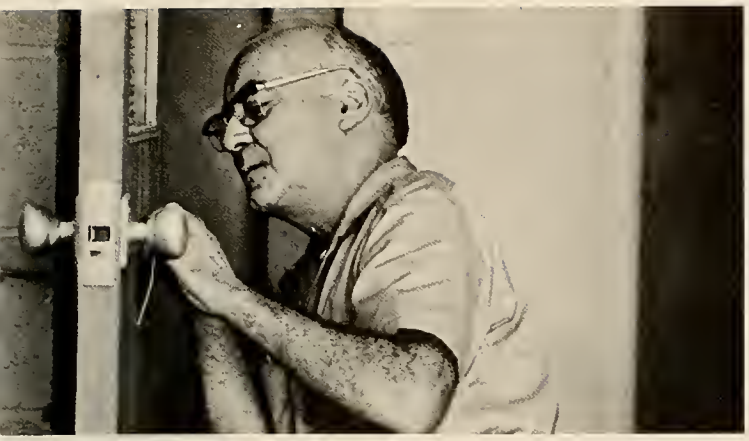
Beneath his gruff, foreboding glare lies a soul of friendliness, enthusiasm, and devotion. Behind a mask of sternness is a subtle wit that sets us at ease, draws us out of ourselves, and makes self-expression a natural reaction. We see in his face both the heat of deep emotion and the coolness of keen perception. Through it we are drawn closer to him for it tells us—here is a man who cares.

For those of us starving to learn, Norman McGowan satisfies our hunger through his own knowledge of books and the times of man. For those of us searching for ourselves and for a clearer understanding of life, he fulfills our need through his knowledge of the nature and problems of people. His manner invites us to reach out—to reach for that elusive something just beyond our grasp—to extend our horizons to a point just beyond our sight.

Salutation

"Parlez-vous français? . . . What's the matter with you today? Come on—you've got to turn on the channel!" Under the code name "French," Mrs. Halper carries out her theme of "communication." She is full of excitement, liveliness, and enthusiasm, but most of all, she wants to reach us, her friends and students. For four years, Mrs. Halper has been battling against a once-existent deadness in our class, and now, she has finally succeeded. Her overwhelming enthusiasm has been infectious for our class and it seems that everyone has caught it by now. She has reached through our cloudy spheres, communicating with us and bringing us light. Since she became our class advisor, she has brought us from one success to the next, and we will sadly miss her guidance when we leave. She will always be a part of us, though; for she has taught us that we can reach many of our goals with enthusiasm, with hope, and with the strength of will.

We thank you, Mrs. Halper, for teaching us, for guiding us, for communicating with us; but most of all, for dedicating yourself to us. We shall never forget you.

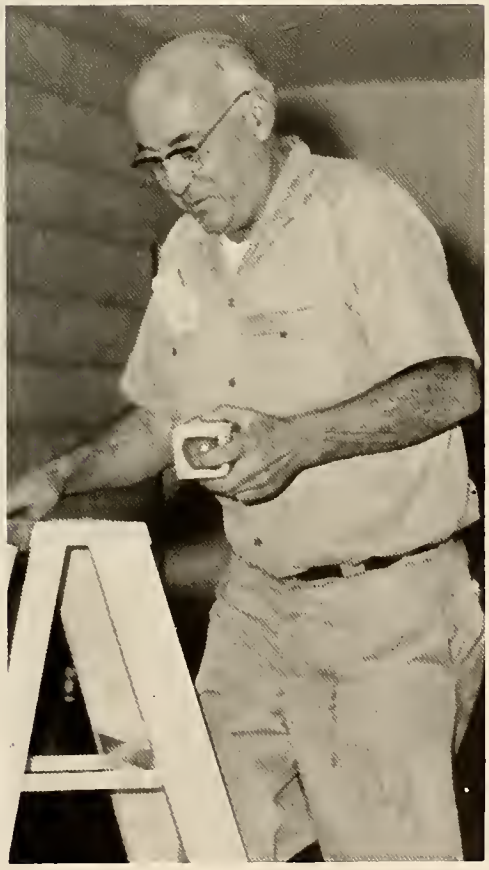


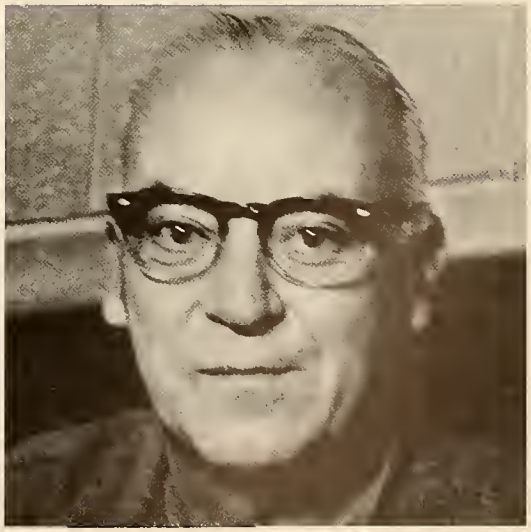
Special Thanks

A friendly smile—a smile that's for everyone, not just a chosen few. A mysterious twinkle in his eye, and a kind comment for all. A slow and easy step that seems to take everything in its stride . . . These are but a few of the many traits that characterize Mr. Perkins. To our class, as to all the classes before us, these traits are important; but even more so is his willingness to help. Whenever we have needed something or someone, he's been there. Without doubt, our proms, dances, and various activities would have been near-failures if he had not been there to support us when some small crisis arose.

Mr. Perkins has been such a wonderful help to everyone of E.B. High that he's really special to us. Therefore, we want to take a moment aside to give an extra-special thank-you to him.

Thanks, Mr. Perkins.





Seniors

A stream of noisy little children bubbling with excitement burst off a bus with bouncing steps. The first day of school is one that we'll never forget—it marked the opening of a totally new chapter of life. Innumerable things have changed us and our lives since then. We've changed from happy first graders, living each day as it comes, to dauntless older children who can "hardly wait 'til Christmas" or an upcoming birthday, to problem-filled teenagers who care about tomorrow—but only individual tomorrows.

Now, we are reaching, ever reaching for a new and better tomorrow when the world may approach a more lasting perfection. So many changes take place so quickly that we often find ourselves shocked and confused, not knowing where to turn next. But still, we will never stop reaching, for reaching is our life. Without it, we would be no better than those who have come before us and failed. With hopes and dreams lighting our hearts and shining within our eyes, we, the Class of 1970, will reach for our futures, for our own kind of perfection—giving and sharing, reaching and dreaming.

An immense, bare gym with stark steel girders covering the ceiling ... what hope could there possibly be for it?

With much determination the class of 1970 took up the task of making this place suitable for our Junior Prom. At first the job seemed one which could never be completed to our expectations in such a short time, but we stuck to it. Slowly we could see our barren gym being transformed into an excitingly blue ballroom. Our hopes soared as we put the finishing touches on it. It was a beautiful sight, but nothing can compare with the beauty and glory of the actual prom. The exultant faces and shining eyes, combined with the beauty of the gowns and formality of the tuxedoes, completed the scene of our Junior Prom—one we will never forget.

Love is Blue

Class Play

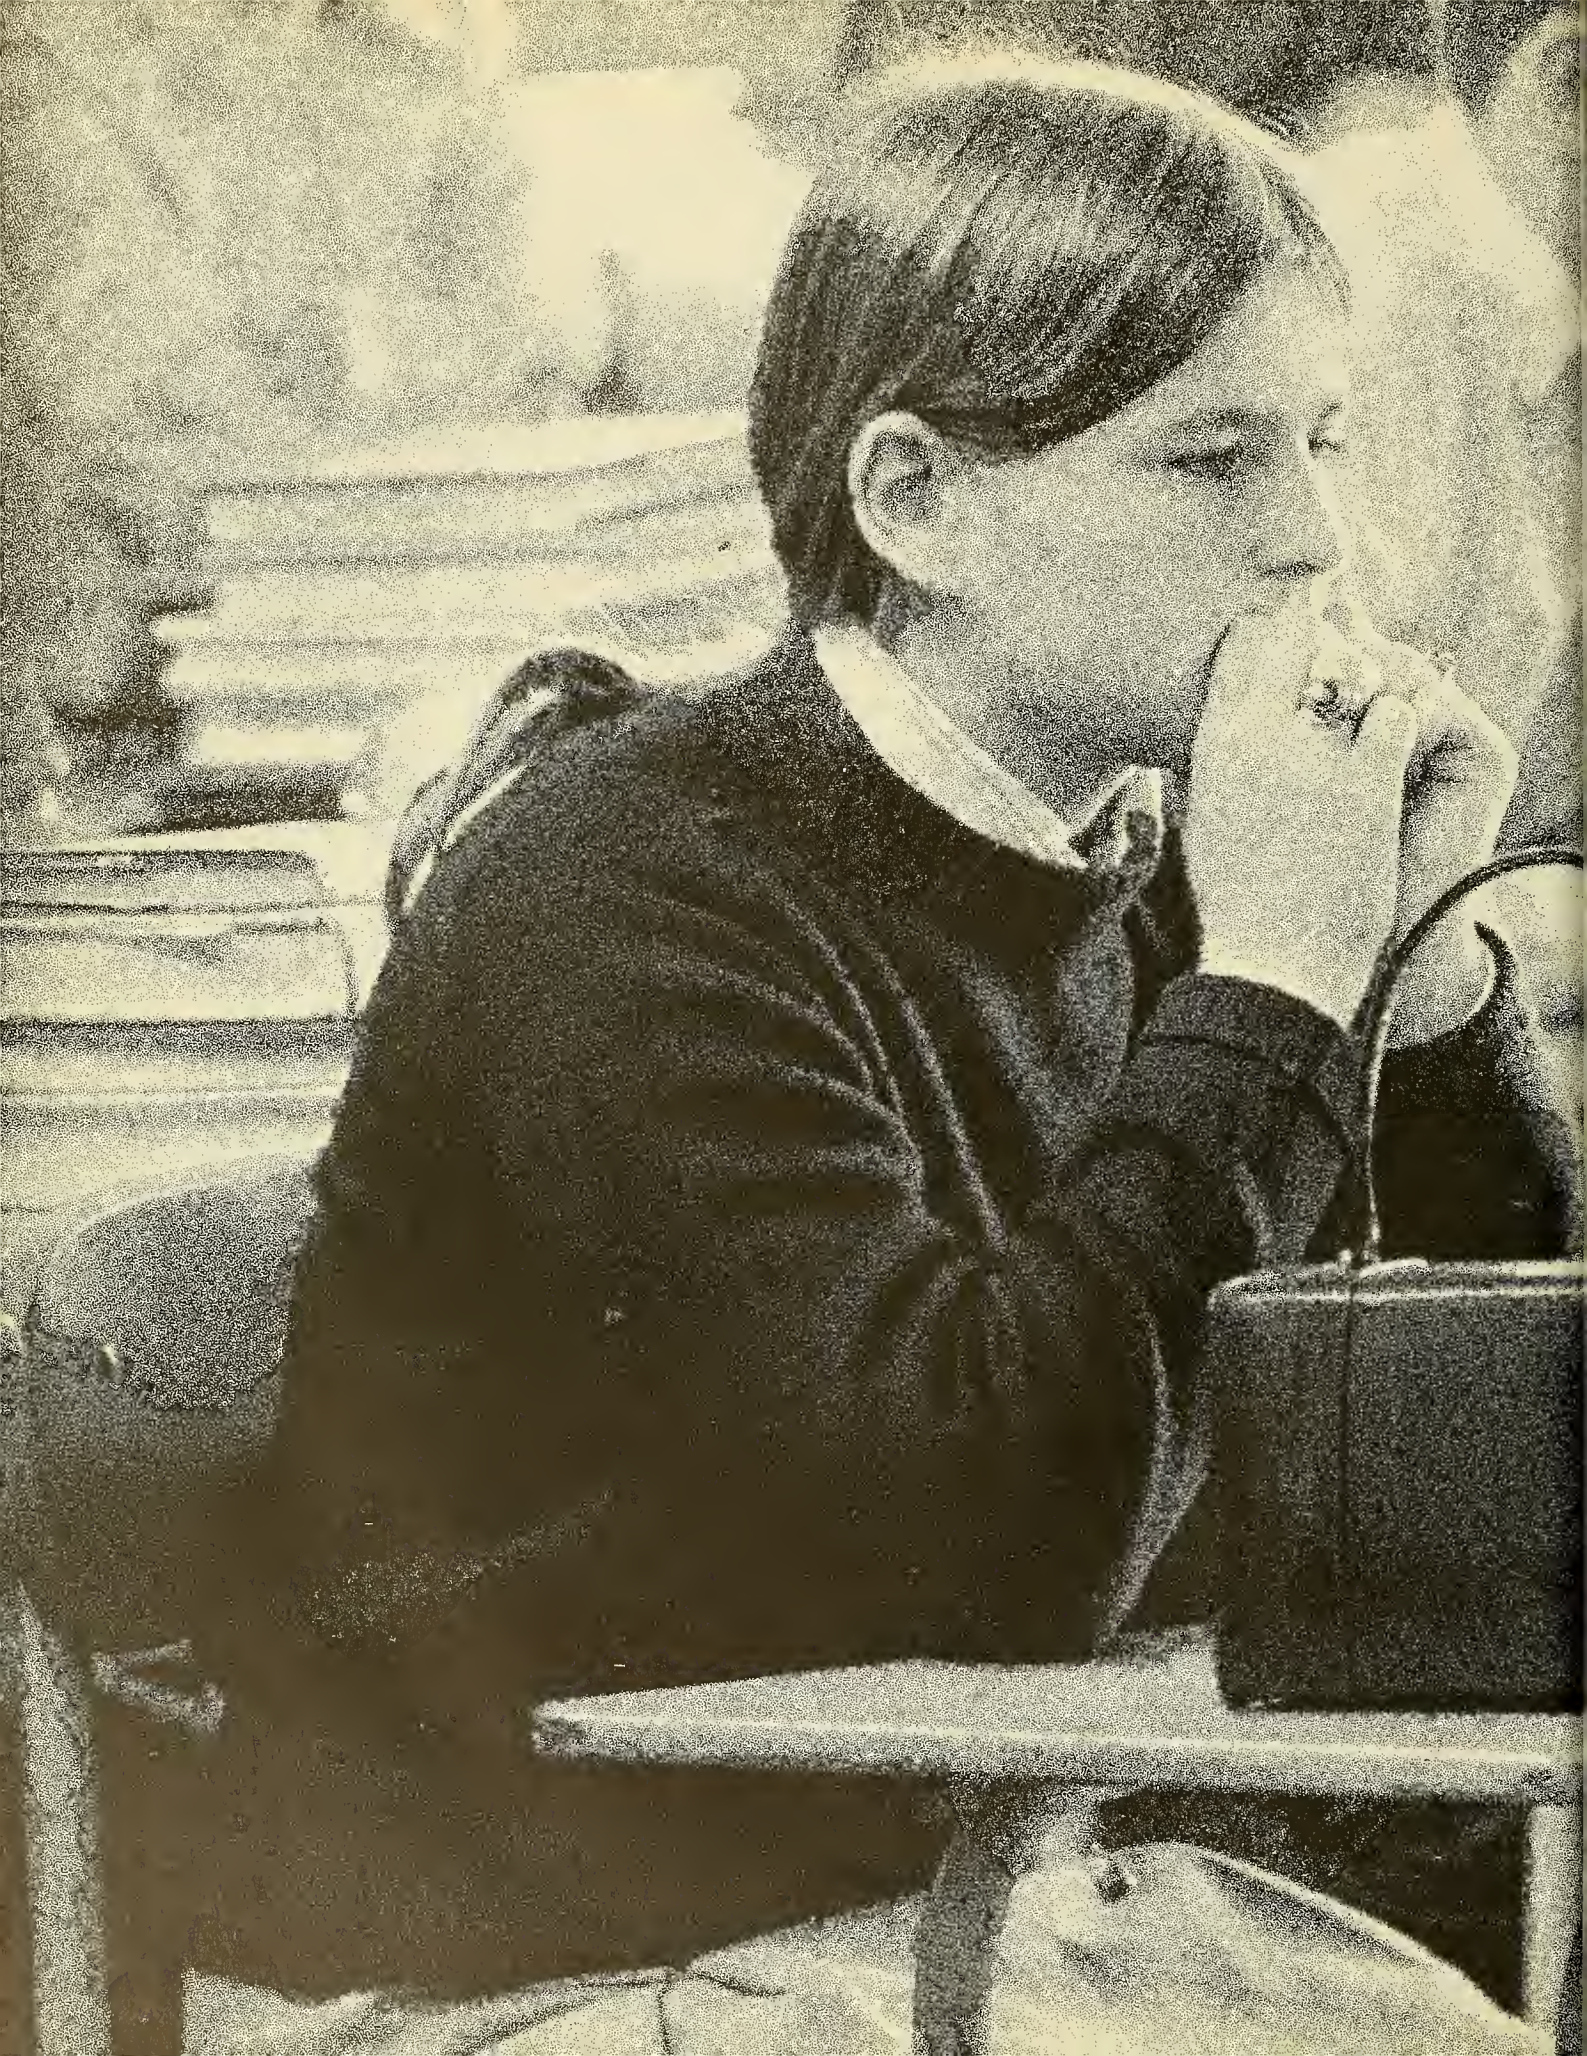
Six long and trying weeks of rehearsals and the depressing feeling that we'd done it right only once. An overpowering sense of futility enveloped many of us. Was it worth it?

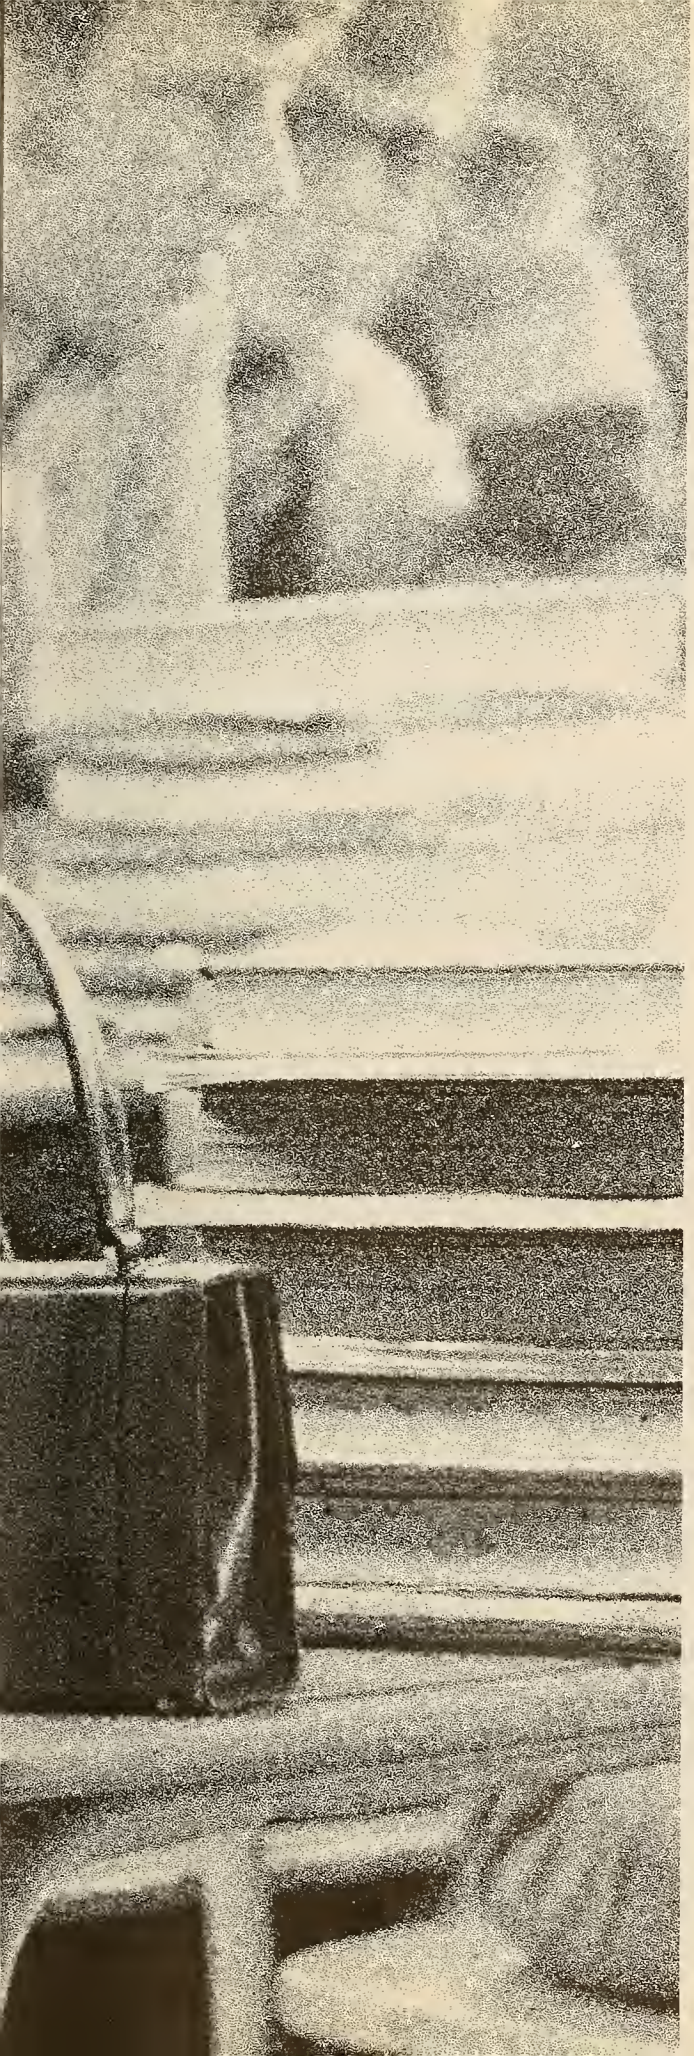
However, in spite of this feeling of impending failure, we had grown close. Our hearts and hands seemed joined as we reached for that fleeting star of success. We had our little inside jokes and a special smile of understanding for those with whom we had worked. We had been screamed at and encouraged; patted on the back and kicked in the seat. We were one as Nature is one.

Yet none of these emotions can even begin to compare with our feelings on our opening night. We started, slowly, nervously, and soon our spirits seemed to fly as we realized that we were doing it perfectly—and better! As the curtain closed that night, we were one more than ever. We were filled with awe, exultant joy, wondrous hope. We had done it!

And now we turn to Miss Cohee. It is she who kept us going; it is she who made us that night; it is she to whom we owe the success. Thank you, Miss Cohee.

Up the Down Staircase





Underclassmen

Life streches out as one beautiful expanse before them while they reach out eagerly to touch it. They have lived sheltered for so long, guarded so carefully against any outside harm, that they are overly anxious to be freed. Their hands are outstretched now, grasping for anything that will bring to them that titillating sense of ultimate joy which they hope to find in life. They know not what awaits them — a life of happiness, satisfaction, and security, or perhaps one in which endless rivers of sadness and failure will bring them only the shiveringly cold and unhappy sensations of insecurity.

We do not wish such things upon them, however. We hope that their final destination will find its acme high above that of which they ever dared dream. We wish them something better than luck or success—we wish them joy.

Sports

Sports to many people consist of touchdowns, home runs, four-minute miles. These feats exist, but there is another less visible side to sports. There are blisters, broken bones, pain, dirt, tedious training, anxiety. No one thinks of the long nights of hard work after school, football practice, missed suppers, lost jobs, or aching bodies when a touchdown seems close at hand. No one thinks of the miles and miles of running that conditioned a player to be able to cross the finish line first. No one thinks of the amount of liniment and tape a football player may have to use so that he can bear the pain of an old injury when he is throwing a key block that opens the field for a 40-yard gain.

Although these aspects of sports exist, it is only by suffering through them that it is possible to realize and attain the glorious satisfaction of victory. The effort and pain make it more of a challenge — the victory is a battle worth winning.

Football

More boys than ever before joined the E.B.H.S. football team this year. Never before had there been as much enthusiasm and as much confidence that this would be the year for a Viking Championship. The season began: wins, one after another. Two, three, four! five! And then on November 1st, at our own home field, we were beaten by the Hanover Indians. Shut-out, 13-0. More than a few tears were shed, many hearts were broken, dreams were crumbled; people were numb, unbelieving.

But we ended the season with a 7-2 record, with a final win over West Bridgewater, our fourth Thanksgiving Day victory in succession.

Never again will other teams speak of the Vikings without respect—and at least a small amount of fear. Again, the Vikings are winners, as proved by the victorious 1969 season.

Basketball

Muscles straining for the highest reach—jump! and the battle begins. A moment's confusion in tangled, struggling arms—then a hand shoots high above the others and the ball sinks smoothly through the basket. Weaving back and forth across the floor, maintaining control of the ball, each boy adds his strength to that precision Viking team-work involved in every game.

Cross Country

To strive for what seems an inaccessible goal — beating a time or an opponent. The battle may take months, even years, to win. During this time, the Cross Country runners must go through rigorous training, both physical and mental. To train themselves to keep running, even when their legs are ready to fold under them—to endure the agony of a heaving ache — to punish themselves in body and mind: these are goals in themselves, hardships each runner must face that he might reach the ultimate goal—the reward of self-satisfaction of competing with one's opponent and one' self.

Ready—hit it! Through a season of strained, often torn muscles, bruises, scrapes, and aches, the cheerleaders strove to encourage the Vikings through many battles. One small group of enthusiastic girls provided the will-power to lead the teams to victory, and the "you-CAN-do-it" spirit that lifted the boys from defeat to the drive that made them victorious again.

Field Hockey

The fight is on —twenty-two anxious girls are desperately grasping for that bit of hidden energy to sustain them through the long flight. It is very often that they race madly down the length of the field, only to find that the ball has been whacked out of reach.

Field hockey is a sport demanding stamina and the will to win. If even the thought of giving up crosses one girl's mind, the threat of defeat stirs the air.

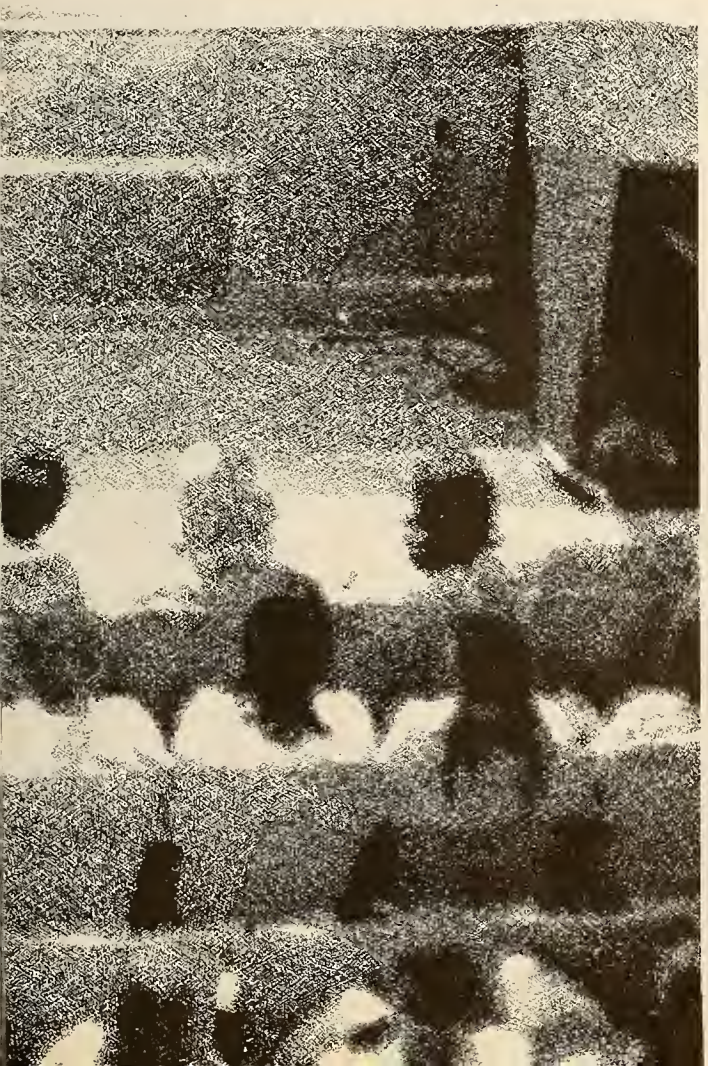
To be a good field hockey player is to strive with undying enery for the benefit of the team; to know that recognition seldom comes, no matter how great the effort; yet to do one's best to make success a goal attained.

VARSITY

A change in rules—and five girls worked double-time where once there were six. With only thirty seconds to make each basket, skillfully, more baskets were made. The urgent last-minute instructions, given in secret at half-time by the very much involved Coach Grande, were carried out with satisfying results. Never before were the EBHS girls better able to prove their talents in basketball; never before did they have such a tremendous season as in 1970.

It was such a great season, that for the first time, EB was represented in the Southeastern Massachusetts Girls' Invitational Basketball Tournament. And amidst shouts of encouragement from fellow team members, looks of tension and urgent prayers from the excited coach, and mixed feelings of thrill and relief, the EB team won the Tournament to bring home—for the first time—a girls' basketball trophy. The 1970 Torch salutes the great desire, pride, and victory of our Viking girls.

Girls' Basketball



Activities

High school is the time of experimentation in many things. The opportunity to be an actor, an artist, a musician, a writer, an athlete, is one not to be overlooked. This is the time when one can discover what talents lie within and if they are worth developing.

Outside the classroom, discussions, exchange groups, field trips all help to expose students to other people's ideas, cultural programs, and new areas of knowledge.

This facet of education is vital, for it is these activities which help to build the individual and prepare him for life.

Office Cadets

File, sort, collect, mimeograph . . . helping to keep the office running as smoothly as it does, the office cadets excel at their work. Staple, cut, stack, run errands . . . and receive little recognition, no pay, where others might demand salary. Yet the pay which they receive is more lasting than money—it is knowledge and the inner satisfaction that comes from helping and accomplishing a worthwhile purpose.

Library Assistants

Library assistants, too, excel at their work—shelving, arranging, stamping books. The girls in return benefit from the experience and enjoy the interesting fun of working with Mrs. Hynes.

Social Studies Club

A calm, easy-going discussion of the dress code from several viewpoints turns to heated arguments of Vietnam, riots, racism, police. Appreciation of the opportunity to express their opinions is proven by the eagerness with which students search for facts to back their personal beliefs.

From various age and grade levels, and different backgrounds, members of the Social Studies Club arm themselves with newspapers, pamphlets, and reference books to enter the club's debates in an attempt at self-expression and learning.

Chess Club

Silence reigns and the match is on. Mind challenging mind, each trying to out-think the other. These people are outstanding in one very important aspect—by learning to develop their minds, they can anticipate one another's move before it is made. They must learn to think out a problem thoroughly before acting upon it, and if a mistake is made, a just compensation must be substituted. This will be a very valuable talent for each student later in life because in learning to adapt chess rules to his own life he will be able to reach that ultimate goal of success with personal satisfaction.

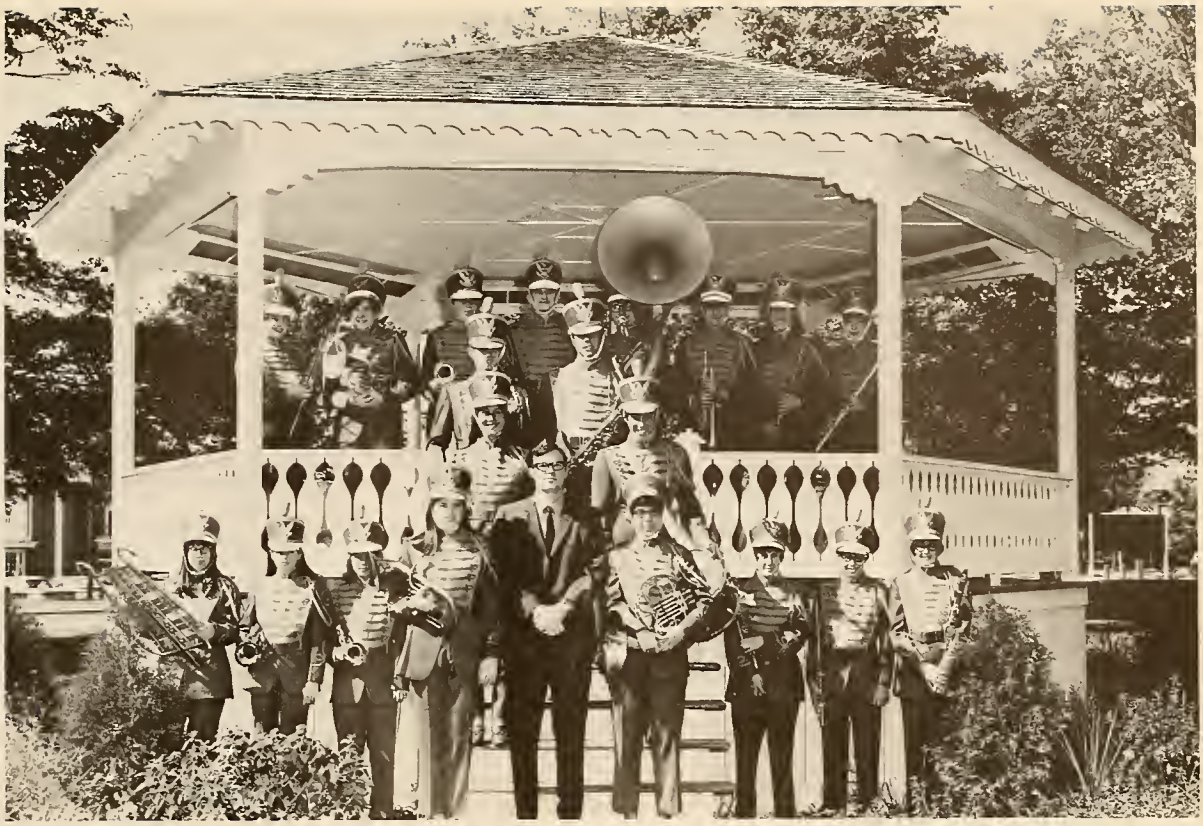
Majorettes

What is a majorette? One could say that she is a girl who marches onto the stage, twirls a shiny baton, and marches off again. But this is only a very superficial judgment, for the efforts of a majorette are much farther reaching.

She is responsible not only to herself but to each other member of the squad. Many hours of diligent work are necessary to prepare each intricate routine, and there is no one to force them to practice.

A majorette learns more than the graceful art which we see performed on stage: she learns the art of discipline and responsibility.

Band



Music—a language in itself. Individuals seemingly with nothing in common gather to play a piece of music: And with few spoken words, there is a truer communication—the reaching of one's feelings toward those of another, the meeting of true minds to create and to learn.

Members of the band seek to express musically the joy of reaching one another and those who listen. In a quiet look, a smile, or thunderous applause, a note of human understanding is reached.

Chorus

What does it take to sing? The greatest voice? No, not really. A convincing smile? Perhaps, at certain times. But it's more of a spirit, an awakening, a love of beauty touched by deep sincerity, even though it's a bit off-key, now and then.

When one man, the embodiment of all that is music, hears beyond the unsure, off-key surface, sees the natural good in each member of a group of people, this man can touch the innermost voice, and suddenly there is music. From nervous uncertainty, to joyous expression, singing of life's trials and its rewards, a group—however small—shares the joys and sorrows of their discoveries of this symphony called Life.

And reaching out, the heart sings.

Drama Club

The Drama Club in our school is a very special club. It is made up of a select group of very devoted people who are willing to work as well as to learn. They are learning to communicate, to reach out and touch the minds of others without using words, but rather movement and facial expressions. They learn each step involved in producing an excellent play, then put their new-found knowledge to work. Drama Club members deserve all the congratulations they get because they have worked so hard in their productions. But even more important than the glamour of spotlights is the fact that they have struggled together and now have their own personal satisfaction in knowing that it was well worth the months of work involved.

French Club

To learn the language and arts of another country, the customs and dress of its people; to share a curiosity of foreign cultures with other people who are also curious: these are reasons for joining the French and Spanish Clubs. And through deep exploration beyond the common knowledge of surface learning, members of the clubs gain a closer contact with other nations.

Spanish Club

Future Nurses' Club

The Future Nurses' Club goes beyond preparing students for a career in nursing. Through hospital volunteer work, visits to nursing homes, and films for children, club members experience the satisfaction of lightening the cares of those who are sick, bringing joy to those who are lonely, thinking of others, and the ultimate satisfaction of being needed.

Norseman

In 1970, the editors and staff of the Norseman have successfully covered all the school events in an attempt to please the entire student body. With the combined efforts of members from each class and club, the newspaper has offered a little something for everyone. Norseman has been a chance for future journalists to experiment with their creativity and to see their work published. Much unseen work and worry goes into the monthly publishing of the paper. Stories to write, pictures to take, dead-lines to meet—these are only a few of the pressures they have had to face. The result has been the publication of the finest paper possible.

STAFF

Torch — 1970

The fear of too-quickly approaching deadlines, the sorrow of missed ones—the long and arduous hours of work, the too-short periods of rest—the confusion of too many people trying to do so many things at once, the lonely silence of being the last one left to work—the utterly hopeless feeling that your work will never be done, the exhilarating feeling of satisfaction with the final end-product for which you have worked so long—

All these things are our yearbook, yet so few people realize what goes on behind that closed door labeled "Torch." Perhaps most people see only how many times their picture was used or if their friend looked better than they did. These things were farthest from the concern of the Torch staff, however. We strove to represent our school and its emotions as a whole—to reach each person in a different way, to show him that he does matter. Within this one book you will find much more than just pictures, and if you will let it, you will see that it is reaching out to you as a very special individual.

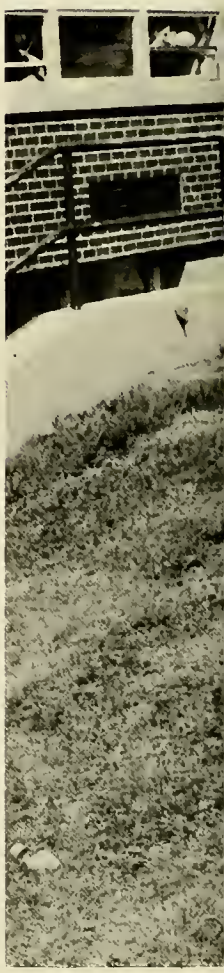
Student Council

The Student Council—used, yet useful in all its efforts; little supported, yet supporting a whole school and the responsibilities that come with representing them before the faculty; complained about and complained to, yet uncomplaining, even under the stress of raising funds, communicating across gaps of misunderstanding, trying when the odds are overwhelming.

Membership is not a simple task, yet evidence of great effort and determination abounds—in a new dress code, several South American exchange students, fund-raising dances, and the use of such funds toward scholarships.

And supporting them in their support of the student body was Mr. Hunt—involved, inspiring, with them all the way.



National Honor Society

The National Honor Society is all too often given the connotation of being a "Brain Society." But the group is far more than this. NHS members deserve much honor because they have made the amazing discovery that to get somewhere you must work hard. This cannot be better proven than by the NHS activities this year. Members have worked very hard to provide a paperback book service for the school, and with the financial profits, hope to offer a scholarship. This is one of the few clubs in our school system which have been successful enough to do this. But even more worthy of note is that NHS has shown increasingly more people that the best way to get ahead is to reach out and grasp the knowledge that is daily offered them. This is easily proven by the fact that each year the society becomes even larger. They are proud of it—and well deserve to be.

Faculty

The frustration of trying to put across an idea, the joy of succeeding; the unpleasant necessity of "disciplining" an over-enthusiast, the thrill of encouraging and channeling enthusiasm; the tedious task of gaining knowledge, the endless reward of sharing it with others eager to learn—a teacher could be considered the ultimate human. In his learning, he is touched by the eternal influence of great minds of the past; in his teaching, he begins the development of the future's brilliant minds. "A teacher affects eternity; he can never tell where his influence will stop."

Principal's Message

Principal Edward J. Meaney

TO THE CLASS OF 1970:

The conclusion of your high school career is approaching. As you prepare to enter a world of new acquaintances and activities it would be wise to reflect for a moment upon the talents that will be needed for the years ahead.

For all of us these years are ones of transition. We today are confronted by an impersonal world that attempts to require conformity and demands that we relinquish that precious characteristic termed individuality. The needs of the masses, the reduction of everyone's personality to a number, in many ways symbolizes the world you are about to enter.

The vastness of today's world tends to encourage an impersonal attitude on the part of man towards his fellow human beings. The elimination of this non-caring attitude is a goal, I hope, that you will strive for in the years to come.

It is easy to be unconcerned about the fate and welfare of people when they are only a statistic. You should and must concern yourselves with the conditions of your fellow man. This can only be achieved if you are willing to communicate with each other.

Through communications you will come to understand, thus the barriers that separate us will be eliminated and we can work harmoniously and cooperatively to improve the world we live in.

I would like to wish you success in the future and I hope that you will look back at your time here at East Bridgewater High School as enjoyable and profitably spent.

Superintendent's Message

TO THE CLASS OF 1970:

Those responsible for your education have a deep obligation to be concerned about their pupils, to listen to them, to counsel with them. There is no obligation to submit to intimidation, violence, and threats.

A question frequently asked by pupils: How can we be effective in getting our ideas across? The answer, of course, is that it is difficult and slow to make progress through democratic, legal, and rational processes. Most pupils feel that as individuals we do not have much influence over the events that affect us. My answer to the Class of 1970 is that to be effective, one must be trusted by others, one must be persuasive with the spoken and written word, one must be informed, one must have judgment and wisdom, and one must work within legal organizations.

The tendency in our society for dissatisfied groups to seek violent means of attaining their ends is a threat to the democratic way of life.

Your teachers, through their daily contacts with their pupils, and through their example of rational and democratic approaches to social and personal problems, can inspire pupils to constructive modes of action appropriate within a democracy.

For your future, I can conceive of no greater achievement than that through your efforts, the world may see an end to social conflict and the development of true liberty, which is liberty with order.

In closing, may I say that it is an honor and a privilege for me to address you.

I would like also to express my high regard for and confidence in the Class of 1970, and to wish each of you great happiness and success always.

Superintendent of schools
Stanley B. Goldman

Landmark to Excellence

Our expanded plant
in East Bridgewater is itself a product of the products we make — the result of emphasizing excellence in manufacturing.

Another result is the good reputation our products have throughout the process industries.

We recommend emphasis on scholastic excellence
to all the students at East Bridgewater High.
It's the surest way we know to achieve success —
and a good reputation.

Epilogue

A year has come and gone—a very special year.
In those months so remarkably slow, yet now seemingly swift in their passing, we have all shared—in things as small as a moment's conversation between classes or as great as a piece of new-found wisdom. In learning of ourselves we have been enabled to grasp a better understanding of others, to learn that each person is an individual, a unique character, yet we all are bound as a strong unit—of humans, Americans, a new generation.

Four years have passed more quickly than it ever seemed possible in the passing;
twelve years of present, living, sad and joyous life are now past. To reach back in memories renews a small measure of the happiness in times we shared. But now, half a dozen times those dozen years are before us, waiting to be filled by new experiences . . .

. . . We stand ready, yet unprepared—sure, yet ever-searching—brave, yet frightened—and beyond, the Road of Life beckons . . .

"The Road goes ever on and on Down from the door where it began.
Now far ahead the Road has gone,
And I must follow, if I can.
Pursuing it with weary feet,
Until it joins some larger,
Where many paths and errands meet.
And whither then? I cannot say."
